LIFE INSURER INVESTMENTS

America's life insurers make certain they will pay benefits when claims are made while simultaneously helping communities thrive. The life insurance industry is the single largest investor in corporate bonds, and 75% of those bonds have a maturity of 10 years or more. Our long-term investments help us deliver on our promises to individuals and families.

POLICYHOLDER PREMIUMS PUT TO WORK

Policyholders pay premiums to their life insurance companies, which prudently invest these amounts to pay future benefits to policyholders. These amounts are invested throughout the economy, providing crucial long-term capital for communities and businesses to grow. The return on these investments enable life insurers to pay benefits, cover policy administration costs and invest for the long term in communities across the nation. Life insurer investments provide businesses, schools, utilities, hospitals and more with the capital they need to expand operations, innovate and create new jobs. And the virtuous cycle repeats itself.
